

Thai Airways has denied a rumor that they will halt their operation for a further four months due to the effect of the spread of COVID-19. As the CAAT has extended the flight ban to Thailand until 31 May, there are no international flights yet. Thai Airways wants to reassure the public that they will resume the operation after the ban has been lifted. Now, the airline is still transporting cargo and agriculture products to help Thai farmers. (30/4/2020)

---